

DiMuro Ginsberg & Mook is pleased to announce that Partner, Nina Ginsberg, has been named one of Washington's 75 Best Lawyers by Washingtonian magazine (April 2002).

Sharing the list with large firm white-collar defense counsels Brendan Sullivan and Earl Silbert, Nina Ginsberg was specifically recognized for her defense of alleged spies. Nina has accepted the Alexandria federal court's appointments to represent three of the last four Americans charged with espionage against the United States. Nina focuses her legal practice on complex criminal trial and appellate litigation, particularly financial and health care fraud, espionage, forfeiture, money laundering and professional ethics.

Nina shares her expertise by being a frequent lecturer and commentator and on local and national news programs and to state and local bar associations and the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. Nina is also Virginia's leading expert on evaluating the consequences of criminal convictions for non-US citizens
